

Luscher Farm Backyard Wildlife Habitat

Luscher Farm has put out the welcome mat for all kinds of birds, butterflies, and other wildlife while helping to protect the local environment. Luscher Farm is now recognized as an official National Wildlife Federation (NWF) Backyard Wildlife Habitat™ site.

By creating a backyard habitat, Luscher Farm has learned the rewards of gardening for wildlife. The program teaches the importance of environmental stewardship by providing basic guidelines for making landscapes more hospitable to wildlife. Changing landscapes to encourage more wildlife also enhances the environment's quality by improving the air, soil and water throughout the community. This effort promotes common sense conservation by reducing and eliminating the need for fertilizers, pesticides, or irrigation water.

Backyard Wildlife Habitat sites can provide a source of solace, comfort, and confidence in the future. Protecting the natural beauty of places we love and the wildlife they support is at the heart of America's conservation ethic, and connecting with nature in our backyard can feed our soul, lift the spirit, mend the heart, and renew faith in our country's tomorrow.
