Description of Physical and or Landscape Features

The C. Gustave and Augusta A. Rosentreter House is on a small, 0.14-acre parcel located a few blocks west of downtown Lake Oswego. The house is aligned with the plat grid, facing west-northwest onto 7th Street. A gable-roofed garage with a north-facing gable dormer stands directly east of the house and is accessed from an alley behind the property that parallels 7th Street.

This house is a one-and-a-half-story bungalow with a rectangular footprint. The building rests on a concrete foundation, is clad with clapboard siding and is capped with a cross-gable roof with composition shingles. The building has a traditional bungalow form, with a broad, low-pitched roof and broad eaves and it also has an inset corner porch, but it displays a number of Colonial Revival elements on the main façade such as a front gable with an enclosed pediment, a Palladian window with a keystone and a plain frieze and dentil molding under the front eaves and pediment. Other decorative elements include lozenge-and lattice-shaped panes on fixed or hopper windows on the north side of the house.

The 1989 cultural resources inventory suggests that the original front door and front porch deck were replaced as well as the entrance being reoriented. There were no known dates for these alterations (Koler and Morrison 1989). More recently the City of Lake Oswego permit files show the garage was replaced and a shed removed from the rear façade to create room for a rear deck. These changes do not greatly reduce the integrity of the home and the primary façade has retained its historic materials and integrity.

The home has many of the character defining features of the Craftsman bungalow style with its low-pitched front-gable roof, wide eaves and partial-width porch supported by tapered columns. The home also has a minor Colonial Revival feature, the Palladian window prominently displayed on the front elevation.

Statement of Significance

The C. Gustave and Augusta A. Rosentreter House, located at 469 7th Street in the First Addition neighborhood of Lake Oswego, was constructed ca. 1925 on the southeast corner of C Avenue and First Street; its original owners were Carl Gustave and Augusta A. Rosentreter according to the Ticor Title Company (Koler and Morrison 1989). The 1989 City of Lake Oswego cultural resources inventory states that the house was moved to its present location in or around 1965; however, the inventory does not provide a source for this information (Koler and Morrison 1989).

C. Gustave Rosentreter was born in Prussia (now Germany) on March 4, 1858 (Lake Oswego Review 1935). He immigrated to the United States in 1881 with his wife Augusta (Passenger Lists of Vessels Arriving at New York 1881). The couple moved first to Ironwood, Michigan, where they apparently resided in a sod house with their children, Rudolph and Louisa (also referred to as Lizzie in some sources) (Marvin 2014). They went on to have three more children, Charles, Frederick and Albert Otto. By 1900, the family was living in Lake Oswego (U.S. Bureau of the Census 1900). Augusta unexpectedly died on August 24, 1912 (Oregon Death Index 1912). After her death, Gustave continued to work as a fisherman and carpenter and at a various assortment of other jobs according to his 1935 obituary in the Lake Oswego Review (Lake Oswego Review 1935).

The Ticor Title Company reported that Arch R. and Lora Lewis, who were retirees, owned the house from approximately 1935 until 1948; Arch Lewis became a widower after his wife's passing in 1943 (Koler and Morrison 1989; The Oregonian 1943). The 1940 federal census lists them as residing in Oswego and shows that they were living in the same house in 1935 (U.S. Bureau of the Census 1940). Arch Lewis died in March of 1954 (Oregon Death Index 1954).

Charles D. and Kay Needham, owners of Needham's Sporting Goods in downtown Lake Oswego, purchased the property from Arch Lewis in the late 1940s (Koler and Morrison 1989). The 1989 City of Lake Oswego cultural resources inventory states that they purchased the property in 1948, but the 1947–1948 Clackamas County Directory lists the Needhams as residing at "First and C" at that time, suggesting that they purchased or rented the property the previous year (Koler and Morrison 1989; Pacific Directory Service 1947–1948). In a 1949 article in The Oregonian, Charles Needham was listed as mayor of Lake Oswego; he had also served on Lake Oswego's City Council for several years (The Oregonian 1949, 1964). Charles Needham died on December 6, 1980 (Oregon Death Index 1980).

With its low-pitched front-gable roof, wide eaves and partial-width porch supported by tapered columns, the house bears the distinct character-defining features of a Craftsman-style bungalow. However, Classical Revival features, mostly ornamental, are also present, such as the Palladian window prominently displayed on the front elevation. Despite having been moved from its original location, the C. Gustave and Augusta A. Rosentreter House is an excellent and relatively rare example of an early Craftsman-style house in Lake Oswego. It is also an important contribution to the historic First Addition neighborhood, with its mixture of early twentieth century, mid-twentieth century and more recent houses.
